In Ohio alone, 7,863 families were victims of the elements. According to the Red Cross, it helped all of those families. The financial outlay, according to reports, totaled $1,965,064.94 in Ohio. Thousands of untrained disaster workers joined Red Cross units in Ohio and stricken neighboring states, wading or going by boat to stranded families. Resues from flood-surrounded homes occurred by the dozens.

Homeless and in many cases with only the clothing they wore, the victims of the floods rallied as aid was given them. Today, in most places, there is little if any evidence of the waters which ran rampant a year ago.

But January has a reputation of being a month of disaster. Old timers recall the "Black Sunday" of 1937 when the Ohio-Mississippi flood turned into the worst in history. That was on Jan. 24. The Ohio River that time did not crest here unitl Jan. 26, when it went to 79.9 feet.

When 2 Plus 2 Make 5

Before budget fixers make a mess of the figures proposed to Congress last Monday, taxpayers need to be "readjusted" too.

Governments can violate all the rules laid down for citizens in the handling of money. This is confusing. It is resented. But it's a

In the case of the Eisenhower administration's latest budget, the issue between the White House and Congress is whether cockeyed government arithmetic will prevail again, or whether government will be forced to use private-citizen arithmetic this time.

The Eisenhower budget is a proposal to sit tight on spending, allowing only a billion and a-half dollars more than before, and to hope for an income boom that will make money run out of the upstairs window of the U.S. Treasury.

The surplus money then would be applied to retire as much as possible of the topheavy national debt, whose interest charges now take 11 cents of every budget dollar-the second largest item of federal spending.

The way things shape up in modern budgets, the only way to reduce the total is to commit all surplus to debt reduction in advance. Otherwise, spenders will grab all uncommitted sums and add them to the spending total.

AS OF NOW, until it has been proved otherwise, there is no congressional majority for holding spending inside the budget recommendation of a little less than 80 billion dollars. Neither is there a majority for adding another half cent to the federal gasoline tax and another cent to first-class mail rates to beef up income.

If the Eisenhower administration wants to end its two terms with a budget in balance and set a good example for the future, it will have to create friendly majorities out of hostile majorities.

Few politicians think this is in the cards. They have wasted no time telling taxpayers not to take the Eisenhower budget seriously. They say it is optimistic about income and unrealistic about outgo.

In an election year, the explain, politicians

This amounts to saying that in an election year the easy way out is to corrupt the public with its own money. This is the way it's done. This is the spend-and-elect formula that every fledgling politico learns at the district boss's knee.

ONE THING could change it.

This would not mean a drastic cutback in federal spending. It would mean nothing more drastic than a return to ordinary

The alternative is to spend to the limit and beyond, adding the deficit to the national debt and the annual interest charges. This has been the procedure for the last 30 years. The national debt has risen steadily since 1931, when it was less than 17 billion dollars. It will be 284 billion by next June 30.

This is the monument Spendocrats have and start paying their unpaid bills.

BUDGET-BALANCING is for squares and fuddy-duddies, they imply. Spending is for smart politicians. So say the Spendocrats. And they think they're the smart politicians. So far, they've been right.

will be making 4 again. They no longer will be able to borrow enough to make 5 and explain to their trusting constituents, "Shucks, it's just money we owe to our selves, so why worry?"

Politics Will Be Cleaner When

One of the regular events before a national election is a proposal to make politics cleaner. The effect might be to put all politicians on the defensive, but it isn't.

They merely think up new ways to get around the intent of all existing laws and reduce to futility the theory of fall proposed laws. Yet, there is an urgent need in the United States for laws to keep individuals and organizations from buying elections. This is the dirty part of politics that needs

Stamp of Leadership

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Ike Guided By Common Sense, Honesty

Seven years have passed since knowledge of governmental affairs. the inauguration of Dwight D. Ei- A president finds it necessary to senhower as President of the United States on Jan. 20, 1953.

The polls show his popularity to be at a very high point. Irrespective of party, there is a feeling of admiration for the man himself. It is not based so much on official actions taken but

David Lawrence on the spirit of conciliation and good will he has manifested in the conduct of national and international policies. Partisans will naturally differ on whether the Eisenhower administration has been a political success, for, after all, the Republican party has not been strong enough to elect a Republican ma jority in both houses of Congress for the last six years of the Eisenhower administration. But on the broad issues close to the hearts of the American people-the maintenance of peace and the handling of the recent economic recessionthere is today a general vote of confidence in the President's way of steering the ship of state.

IN THE ABSENCE of concrete proof of why an administration is popular, there are always suppositions-some of them superficial -which do not explain the upward turn of the curve of popularity. One of these is that Mr. Eisenhower suddenly became a fullfledged President when John Foster Dulles passed away and when Sherman Adams resigned. This is an ill-informed view, but it is wide-Actually, the President would be the first to say that Mr. Dulles was not the inflexible person he was so often described to be. It is being said that Mr. Eisenhower wouldn't have engaged in personal diplomacy had Mr. Dulles lived but the President went to the "summit" conference in 1955 with Mr. Dulles at his side. As for Shermas Adams, he did operate the executive staff somewhat differently than it is being carried on today but the mere change in staff formula could hardly account for the emergence of Mr. Eisenhower as a successful president.

Perhaps the real reason is so simple that it is easily overlooked. A president cannot familiarize himself with all the requirements of his job is four years, so it is in the second term that he really begins to feel sure-footed.

THE ADVISERS who surround a chief executive often overwhelm a president with their intimate rely on subordinates far more in his first term than in his second.

This correspondent has watched several presidents in office and has come to the conclusion that it is more important for a chief executive to possess good judgment, a keen sense of what is right or wrong and the courage to make unpleasant decisions than it is for him to be an expert in governmental affairs.

Mr. Eisenhower has made mistakes and in some controversies has not always come out on top but he does have the courage of his convictions.

He sticks to principle when there is something fundamental involved. He has learned, of course, that in the legislative world the give-andtake process is sometimes essential to progress.

Certainly the Eisenhower personality has been a great asset in maintaining cordial relations between the White House and Con-

Looking back over the seven years, many people do not realize how difficult the presidency really is for any man who does not have a majority of his own party in

Long after the present generation has passed into history, the Eisenhower tact and good nature, as well as diplomacy, in dealing with Congress will be pointed to as an excellent example of successful cooperation between the two branches of government, especially in international relations.

MR. EISENHOWER hasn't always had the best cabinet personnel but he has done far more himself to exercise leadership on na tional as well as international policies than the public generally realizes and this didn't begin in the second term either.

The President has learned by experience, of course, and that's why he asserts himself far more today than when he first took office. He feels now that he knows the job and that his judgment, based on actual experience with some problems, is as good as that of some of his advisers.

He receives a lot of factual information and quickly absorbs it but in retrospect it will be affirmed by those who have an intimate knowledge of the present adminstration that President Eisenhower has always been his own

Mr. Eisenhower has proved in seven years that a man without a technical knowledge of the many problems of government today can nevertheless conduct himself as an effective leader by the simple process of using common sense and common honesty as his guide.

Three Beauty Secrets

By TRUMAN TWILL

I do not know any of the clothes styled a n d reasonably priced horses who paraded to the post in the annual list of the world's bestdressed women. This list is compiled by the Fashion Hall of Fame, a culture group in New York City, and apparently is the one we gooks in the hinterlands are supposed to take seriously.

But none of the listed ladies know me, either, so our indifference is mutual. On second thought know one of the ladies, though - and on second glance - I do she would not know me. She inadvertently ate lunch with me and

I id not know then she would be one of the best-dressed women in the world. The only impression she made on me was vivacity: I didn't even notice what color her dress was, which is one of those lapses that infuriate wives if husbands mention-as I inevitably did - that I had broken bread with a famous lady.

the best-dressed honors should go to women whose husbands don't have two $1,000 bills to rub together. I never cease to marvel at the miraculous results attained by women of modest means.

Comparisons are both tricky and risky, yet I think it is safe to say that modern American women are 100 times better off than they used to be in respect to appearance. In these days, a stenographer can dress better and look more attractive than a mogul's lady could have looked not too many years

This would have been accomplished, furthermore, without any fuss. The local gals would have picked up their wardrobes in local shops and stores. All they would have needed was an eye for line and fabric and color to look better than most princesses, as good as most of the Mrs. Gotrocks and almost as good as the professional glamor girls whose clothes are draped on them for fashion credits in the program acknowledgments.

And to keep the record straight, some of the local chic chicks would have accomplished it with their own ingenuity on sewing machines, as far as clothes were concerned, plus a few squeeze bottles of hair goop and 15 minutes of exercise a day. Nowhere on earth-and I have

Unpredictable Niles Squad Host To Quakers On Friday

Has Reputation for Winning 'Big Ones'

By DICK BRAUTIGAM

An unpredictable Niles McKinley cage squad, unbeaten in two games on its home floor, will entertain the Salem Quakers (7-1) on Friday night in the new spacious Niles High School gym.

The Red Dragons have won only half of their eight games this season, but Coach Joe Bassett's quintet has a reputation for winning the big ones and blowing contests against weaker clubs.

Included among the four victims of the Red Dragons are McKinley and Lincoln, a pair of highly regarded Canton outfits. Niles trimmed the Bulldogs 48-43 and edged the Lions 59-54.

NILES CHALKED up victories in its only two home games this season over Youngstown Ray en and Boardman, both future opponents of the Quakers.

The Red Dragons have been on the short end of scores against Newton Falls, Youngstown Chaney, Youngstown Ursuline and Warren. The defeat by Warren came in Niles had a 30-28 lead at halftime but lost the game 50-46. Salem beat

This Is The Agriculture Experts' 'Inner Sanctum'

A guard makes sure no one leaves the crop board meeting room

U.S. Department of Agriculture Crop Reporting Board begins tabulation of information early on until a report is completed, ready for release to news media. the day a report is due. It includes statisticians and specialists in varied fields.

Ever since Civil War days, farmers have looked to the U.S. Department of Agriculture to tell them what other farmers are planting and how the market is doing. Official crop reports give the estimated acreages of various crops, lookedfor yields, prices, etc. Issued periodically, they are designed to put farmers on an equal bargaining basis with buyers and to reduce speculation in the markets. The first report in 1863 was assembled from questionnaires sent to about 2,000 farmers in 22 states. Today, 800,000 farmers, merchants and mill opera'ors answer the questions that provide the basis for USDA's sizing up of the present and future status of more than 100 crops, livestock and livestock products. Ever since 1905, the reports have been compiled behind locked doors and shuttered windows, because in that year signals flashed from a window are said to have enabled a group of cotton speculators to make a quick profit.

BENEATH THESE WATERS - On Dec. 7, 1941, at Pearl Harbor, the battleship USS Arizona was sunk by a single Japanese bomb. Of the Arizonas 1,543 sailors and Marines, 1,102 still remain aboard. Now a memorial, shown in drawing above, is to be built above their common grave. A rectangular concrete facade will stretch 186 feet from the outboard side of the ship to nearby Ford Island, spanning the main deck house which is still above water. The structure will house a museum and a ceremonial bridge. The memorial will be completed in time for dedication on Dec. 7, 1960.

THE STRANGE CASE OF CONDEMNED CONVICT CARYL CHESSMAN

Few prisoners have stirred so much controversy as Caryl Chessman, who has spent the last 12 years in San Quentin nocence.

story? Family Weekly assigned Evan McLeod Wylie to investigate the background of this sensational case. In the article, "Eleven Years in Death Row," read how a man convicted of the most violent crimes in the book leads a quiet, studious life in prison;; how he smuggled out the manuscripts of his books;; and details of the trial which his supporters say did him less than full justice. Now that the U.S. Supreme Court appeal and Chessman faces execution again, you can discover the forgotten fac's of this famous case in Family Weekly, appearing with Sat., Jan. 23rd edition of THE SALEM NEWS.

Regular Family Weekly features include the Family Weekly Cookbook, featuring new ways to serve favorite cuts of meat; puzzles and games for the children in Junior Treasure Chest; and laughs for all in Quips and Quotes.
